First Look: Ritmo Prenatal Sound System

Posted by Nicole Feliciano

Want to get your kid hooked on Radiohead early? Try this prenatal music system.

Type A parents have been putting iPod buds on mom's belly for years. The thought is that early exposure to Mozart will make the fetus smarter and the newborn will have an early appreciation for the arts. The Ritmo ($99.99) take the concept a step further.

This is a stereo belt for pregnant women. According to the marketing materials: "Babies exposed to prenatal music and sound show superior mental abilities and coordination." If you agree and you're always up on the latest musical gadgets you won't want to miss out on this chance to start in utero Music 101. Simply hook up your iPod to the belt and start your playlist. Mom can be walking, shopping, and educating all at the same time—the belt wraps the Mom-to-be's belly with tunes. Ritmo's speakers control the sound level so you won't blast baby's eardrums.

The Nuvo group will offer the prenatal belt in January of 2009.
