Nuvo's Ritmo Advanced Pregnancy Sound System jacks your baby in to your terrible music taste

By Paul Miller posted Jan 14th 2010 8:59AM

Nuvo has just released its $130 Ritmo "Advanced Pregnancy Sound System," which is a pregnant belly belt composed of four belly-firing speakers, with a built-in iPod pocket, 3.5mm jack and volume-regulating abilities. You could jack in your phone for a bit of long distance baby conversation, but for the most part you know this belt is going to be inundating your child-to-be with Josh Groban and The Ting Tings. And do you really want that on your conscience? There's video after the break.

I LOL'd @ "belly-firing". Womb-firing might have been better. Or worse. Depending on how you look at it.

This will be required in the USA and EU for the compulsory pre-natal conditioning as of 2011, paid from the carbon tax (^_~)

N8theGr8 Posted Jan 14th 2010 9:23AM NEUTRAL

I saw this on a news program the other day and a Dr. came on saying this is the equivalent of putting your babies head against a speaker because the Amniotic fluid actually amplifies the sound in the womb especially low-pitched sounds.

Swackhammer1 Posted Jan 14th 2010 9:25AM HIGHEST RANKED

The tag line for the product should read:
Why wait till your child is a teenager? Damage their hearing before birth!

A few pre-natal care tips:

No Alcohol, no drugs, no smoking, no roller coasters... and no gimmicky gadgets, ok?

M3 Posted Jan 14th 2010 9:41AM HIGHEST RANKED

Honestly, I could see this thing causing birth defects. A constant source of a good deal of vibration is not a non-issue. There's a reason you can only get so many ultra-sounds.

PerryAJ Posted Jan 14th 2010 12:56PM NEUTRAL

@M3 Agree - studies show that a fetus is certainly aware of and impacted by noise in the womb (especially things like Mom's voice), I sure as well wouldn't want to use this thing. Beyond that, the fact that the auditory cortex is developing so dramatically during that 9 months, I would be scared of causing permanent damage.

cherryboom Posted Jan 14th 2010 10:12AM NEUTRAL

that chick is hot!

raionyuki Posted Jan 14th 2010 10:21AM NEUTRAL

There is no such thing as a free lunch.. lol..

Tidal Posted Jan 14th 2010 10:24AM NEUTRAL

I thought studies concluded that playing music for a fetus in-utero had no substantial benefits? Some doctors go so far as to imply that the baby may even be experiencing discomfort. I would think hearing mommy's heartbeat would be a far more calming and pleasant experience than some shitty music.

Wwhat Posted Jan 14th 2010 3:38PM NEUTRAL

@Tidal
there's always talk-radio, get them brainwashed early.

airmikee Posted Jan 14th 2010 10:26AM NEUTRAL

Wasn't that junk science busted shortly after it got popular?

Xax Posted Jan 14th 2010 10:32AM NEUTRAL

Why anyone would be motivated to use something like this is beyond me.

Pies Posted Jan 14th 2010 11:31AM NEUTRAL

"Ritmo: because forcing a featus to listen to your music shows that you care."

Dan Fruzzetti Posted Jan 14th 2010 11:43AM NEUTRAL

Disconnecting your child that early from nature is a mistake. I wish people would think about their children's experiences when they were raising small children. Maybe we wouldn't have so many jacked up teenagers -- you teenagers reading this are not likely to be among the ones I'm talking about; the ones I'm talking about get straight Fs in high school and eventually drop out.
