BREAKING NEWS

Report: College endowments suffer huge decli

January 28, 2010

Search

Advanced Search

Log In | Register

Connect

HOME US WORLD POLITICS BUSINESS TECH ENTERTAINMENT LIFE SPORTS OPINION RESEARCH VIDEO DC TRAWLER SEND TIPS

Advanced prenatal music player now available

By Mark Wilson - Gizmodo 01/14/10 at 7:47 pm

It's never too early to corrupt a child's musical tastes, but sadly, you can't just shove a pair of white earbuds into the womb—not without a lot of work. The solution?

The Ritmo Advanced Pregnancy Sound System shares pretty much any source that's got a headphone jack (iPods, Blackberries, etc) with a baby via a speaker-filled strap. The strap wraps around an expectant mother's stomach, connects to an audio regulating breakout box and shares her playlist with her unborn child.

Full story: Ritmo pregnancy sound system forces the devils music on little angels – Gizmodo

Tags: children's music, Headphones, iTunes, music player, Portable media players, prenatal care, Ritmo, Ritmo Advanced Pregnancy Sound System

(No Ratings Yet)

Related Articles

- Critics blast Apple's new iPad tablet
- 10 Best Bets for Apple's 'Latest Creation' Event
- Rise of MP3 players hasn't led to rise in hearing loss

Editor's Picks

-
  A Republican alternative to health care and spending
-
  Test-driving General Motors' new Chevy Volt
-
  Arne Duncan is sitting on $4.35 billion

Latest Research

- FPI Analysis: President Obama's Foreign Policy, Year One